Dismantling mechanical and functional toys was something I did more often than playing with these toys in my childhood. It was the inquisitiveness to understanding their inner workings that lead those toys to ruins. This curiosity eventually guided me to reconstruct and create my own playful machines.

These contraptions are made using local liquid dispensing objects such as Chainak(kettles) and Keip (Funnels). Various motors are added to these devices to give them distinct motion which propels them into creating paintings where the result is exciting yet unknown.
